Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an imaging apparatus and an imaging method. 2. Description of the Related Art Conventionally, in an imaging apparatus for photographing a subject with a camera, an image obtained by image capturing of a subject is generally processed in order to improve the image quality thereof. For example, in order to correct color aberration, in the image obtained by image capturing, pixel values of specific pixels are corrected in accordance with predetermined correction values (color aberration correction coefficients). Also, in the image obtained by image capturing, pixel values of specific pixels are corrected in accordance with predetermined correction values (distortion correction coefficients), in order to correct distortion. Japanese Patent Application Publication No. 2011-053676 discloses a technique in which the pixel values of a plurality of specific pixels are corrected with the color aberration correction coefficient and the distortion correction coefficient. In the above-mentioned technique, a color aberration correction area and a distortion correction area are specified in a captured image, and the pixels of the area are corrected. However, in Japanese Patent Application Publication No. 2011-053676, there is a case in which an edge portion or a character of the subject is extracted from the captured image, and the image of the edge portion or the character is processed. In this case, the method of Japanese Patent Application Publication No. 2011-053676 may be unable to appropriately correct the color aberration and the distortion. Therefore, a technique is desired which can more appropriately correct the color aberration and the distortion. In the United States, patent access to 3e33713323
