It's in an option list in the Filters tab. Go to the Filters menu > Filters > Photoshop > Image Effects > Gradient Overlay > Saturation and desaturate the image. In Photoshop, select a color stop, right-click and choose New Color Area. Use the settings shown on the photo below. Click on OK. Download the grunge PSD Download grunge PSD from the link below. Click on the image below. The grunge PSD is in the Resources folder. Create the grunge effect Now we need to edit the grunge effect we've just created. Open the grunge effect and start making changes, using the tool above. Use the brush tool to paint a part of the image. Create a texture by using the paint bucket. The texture needs to be lighter. Create a new layer, right-click on it, go to Layer > New > Solid Color. Use a color that you like. The texture needs to be lighter so use the paint bucket with Softness set at 5. Repeat the last step until you get this result. Now it's time for some grunge. Create a new layer and fill it with Linear Dodge. Go to the Dodge and Burn tool, select the Gradient tool and load the grunge gradient. Go to Edit > Stroke. The settings for the stroke will be the same as shown here. Now just paint over the image. You can color the image with different gradients and paint over it again. Create a new layer and fill it with Linear Dodge. Now use a soft brush and paint the image. You can create grunge effects with different colors. Create grunge effects with different colors. Create grunge effects with different colors. The grunge effect that we've just created is pretty simple and will work with any image.
