In spite of the parties' low expectations for a major diplomatic breakthrough, Prime Minister Netanyahu and President Rouhani may have just agreed on the outlines of a deal. If they can agree on the framework of a permanent deal, all they'll need to agree on is an agreement on how to fill in the details. The Israeli response is thus two-fold: first, to show that Netanyahu can still make a deal on Iran, and second, to ensure that the deal actually includes the framework that Netanyahu originally sought, namely, an end to Iranian enrichment and a demand that it sign a permanent agreement with the IAEA. Netanyahu has shown in the past that, if the country can't reach an accord by a particular deadline, he'll push for a different deadline and then make a different deal. In 2011, he pushed for a total freeze on all Iranian enrichment, and when he couldn't get it, he made the partial freeze he did get. This approach can work, provided the conditions are right. It needs the right structure to ensure that the deal lasts, and it needs the world to stay in a unified position. During the talks on Tuesday, the sides agreed on the general framework of a deal that would ensure that Iran would not get the ability to produce nuclear weapons. They also agreed on the framework of a permanent agreement, which will be kept under seal until after the negotiations. While the prime minister and his ministers may be happy that they've managed to find an agreement, many other Israelis are a bit more jaded. The way the situation evolved made it difficult for the country to know what was happening. First, Netanyahu announced his intention to talk to Rouhani on the phone, without informing anyone else. The government didn't even try to stop this, despite the fact that Rouhani's position was weak at the time. Second, the foreign minister, despite having a stronger hand to play, preferred to go to France for the talks. It seems that Netanyahu acted on his own, and that the government didn't consider the fact that even as he was talking to Rouhani on the phone, he was also meeting with the foreign minister in Paris.

Racial and socioeconomic disparities in the treatment of intracerebral hemorrhage. The authors sought to determine whether racial and socioeconomic disparities exist in the treatment of intracerebral hemorrhage (ICH). They queried the ICH Stroke Registry of the United States (ICH Registry) for patients with first-ever ICH hospitalized between January 1, 2000, and December 31, 2005, and found that 16% of patients were black and 9% were Hispanic. The median income for patients' zip codes was $55,910, with an average of three employed persons per household. From 1998 to 2005, ICH-related death rates increased from 13.5 to 20.3 per 100,000. Although black patients had a higher adjusted mortality rate than Hispanic patients (27.3% vs. 11.1%, respectively;  $p = 0.042$ ), their treatment was similar. There were no differences in the treatment of Hispanic and non-Hispanic white patients. Patients living in zip codes with lower median incomes had a higher risk-adjusted mortality than did those living in zip codes with higher

What's New In AutoCAD?

Mobile App: Now you can build drawings from virtually anywhere, using your phone or tablet, whether you're at home, on the road, or at a client site. You can browse pre-loaded drawing templates, create new ones using a variety of templates from different file types, and download and open them on your mobile device. And if you are drawing from a mobile device, you can use the Mobile App to import sketches and share them as annotated drawings. New Metric Addition: You can now manage the addition of metric measurements to your drawings. For example, you can add a measurement and verify the metric value automatically. Autodesk Augmented Reality (AR): Save hours of work. Augment your design with virtual assets like 3D models, images, and overlays. The built-in support for ARC files in AutoCAD 2019 releases made it easy to share your ideas with others. Now you can use this feature to go one step further—share high-quality, personalized views of your designs that your peers can access with a few taps on their mobile devices. With Autodesk AR, you can import your AutoCAD drawings
