A 65-year-old diabetic woman was referred to our hospital because of suspected lung cancer. Chest X-ray films revealed an abnormal shadow in the right upper lung field. A computed tomography scan of the thorax showed a nodular lesion with cavitation and an irregular wall in the right upper lobe. This lesion showed high-level uptake of 18F-fluorodeoxyglucose on positron emission tomography (FDG-PET). Thus, pulmonary actinomycesis was suspected. The lung tumor was resected and the patient was discharged without any complications. Histological diagnosis was actinomycesis. The relationship between actinomycesis and diabetes mellitus remains unclear
